

GORGEOUS WEDDING.

Marriage of the New Czar of Russia and the Princess Alix.

THE ROYAL POMP AND CEREMONY

Of the Occasion Unparalleled in the Capital of the Great Empire—Scenes of Splendor on the Streets and in the Palaces—Tremendous Enthusiasm of the People—Details of the Affair—How the Imperial Bride and Bridegroom were Greeted—A Brilliant Spectacle—Forty Thousand Poor People Fed by the Czar.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 26.—Before 7 o'clock this morning large crowds of people were assembling on the Newsky Prospect in order to secure places along the route of the royal wedding procession. From the Anitchkoff palace to the winter palace the whole avenue was lined with troops.

The morning broke dull and cold, but dry. Before long the whole front of the route was black with people. There was not an inch of space to spare along the Grand Morskaja prospect, and on the square in front of the winter palace. The correspondent of the Associated Press secured a position midway between the two palaces, from which he was able to obtain a good view of the procession behind windows, which, as usual in winter, were fastened in an airtight manner. From this point of vantage could be seen thousands of faces, eager to greet the czar and his bride. The large majority of the stores were closed, and in the windows were prominently displayed colored portraits of the czar and Princess Alix.

At 11:15 a. m. in the distance was suddenly heard the grand swelling strains of the national anthem, and all along the route the multitudes uncovered in anticipation of the approach of the bridal party.

Soon after there appeared an open state carriage drawn by four white horses. In this vehicle were the czar and his brother, Grand Duke Michael. They both wore the uniform of hussars of the guard and were greeted with a vociferous outburst of cheering which was renewed again and again. The czar's equizage was preceded and also followed by detachments of chevaliers des gardes and hussars and banners of the guard, all in brilliant gala uniforms. Then came a superb landau, also drawn by four white horses, in which was Princess Alix and the czarina. They received, if possible, even more hearty popular greeting upon the czar himself. Handkerchiefs and hats were waved in the air and intense enthusiasm prevailed.

After the carriage of the princess and the czarina followed a long train of carriages with the royal guests, including the prince and princess of Wales, the Princess Irene of Prussia, the Grand Duchess Sergius and other prominent members of the imperial family, as well as all the wedding guests.

Military bands were stationed at various points along the route between the two palaces and they each struck up the national anthem as the cortege approached. The national hymn was thus sounded in the ears of the imperial party along the entire route.

The wedding procession entered the winter palace at 1:15 p. m., where, as soon as possible afterward, were assembled all those who had been invited to be present at the wedding.

Reaching the winter palace, the royal party entered the Malachite Hall, where the bridal procession was formed. At its head were the court functionaries and then came the czarina, escorted by the king of Denmark, her father. The czar and Princess Alix came next, followed by the prince and princess of Wales and the other members of the imperial and royal families, another batch of court officials bringing up the rear.

DIFFERENT TIMES. The big, bulky pills such as our grandfathers had to put up with won't do to-day. Medical science has gone beyond them. It has given us something better—Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets; tiny as mustard seeds, but more effective than anything you can take. That's because their action is more natural. They have a peculiar strengthening or tonic effect on the lining membranes of the intestines, which gives a permanent cure. They prevent, relieve, and put an end to Biliousness, Constipation, Jaundice, Dizziness, Sour Stomach, Sick or Biliary Headaches, Indigestion, and every like disorder.

the concert hall, the panels on the walls being decorated with the silver plates upon which the Russian people presented to the late czar bread and salt during his journey through the empire, and upon the occasion of his coronation. A large crystal candelabra was suspended from the ceiling.

The Nicholas Hall was next entered by the wedding party. It was decorated with white and gold, and adorned by richly embellished panels, the work of famous artists. In the center of the wall was a striking portrait of Nicholas I.

The bridal procession then traversed the Fore hall, splendidly decorated in empire style, the field marshals' salons where a variety of large wall paintings adorned the walls; and then passed through the famous Petrofsky hall in which stands the throne of Peter the Great, and which is graced with ancient furniture of oxidized silver. From this magnificent apartment the wedding procession slowly passed through the hall of the court of arms, named after four enormous allegorical figures of Russia holding in their hands the emblems of all the governments of the empire.

The bridal procession then found itself in the Fikotnay room, which adjoins the church. In this room remained the majority of the officials and the members of the lesser nobility, only the imperial family and their royal guests and the indispensable functionaries passing into the small chapel, which is a most gorgeous little temple, glittering with gold and suco work.

On the right hand of the chapel, in glass cases, were all the sacred relics brought to Russia by the Knights of Malta, including the hand of St. John the Baptist, the martyr, Saint Irene, and the miraculous image of the Virgin Mary. These are ornamented with enormous sapphires in the form of tears.

The costumes in the chapel were dazzling. Most of the ladies wore the Russian costume, very low before and behind and with arms bare almost to the shoulders.

The bride's dress was white, richly embroidered with gold, and on her hand was the usual kokoshnik belonging to the costume, and ornamented with diamonds. At the top of the kokoshnik was a small crown of diamonds. The bride's mantle was of purple velvet lined with ermine.

The head dresses of the other court ladies were of ancient gold brocade, adorned with sapphires, emeralds and rubies.

When all the wedding guests were assembled the marriage ceremony was carried out according to the rites of the Greek church.

The wedding procession was then reformed and the guests re-entered their carriages.

The dowager czarina was the first to drive back to the palace.

The czar, with the czarina, returned to the Anitchkoff palace in the same landau amid the unbounded enthusiasm of the immense crowds of people gathered to greet them. The czar graciously saluted the crowds on either side of the route, and the czarina bowed repeatedly in answer to the cheering of the people and evinced considerable emotion.

On reaching the cathedral of Kazan, which is a most imposing edifice hall surrounded by a colonnade, recalling St. Peter's at Rome, there was a remarkable spectacle. There was literally a sea of heads extending up the Newsky prospects, and the multitude was so densely packed that the troops had the greatest difficulty in preserving a pass- age for the wedding procession.

The bells in all the churches were merrily peeling the wedding chimes, and above all could be heard the distant booming of cannon from the fortress and other places.

The crowds had awaited for hours with incredible patience, which was converted into enthusiastic cheering as the first detachment of cavalry, escorting the dowager czarina, dashed by and announced the return of the imperial party. The dowager czarina pushed on ahead to the Anitchkoff palace in order to be the first to greet the newly married couple on their arrival there.

When the second cavalry escort trotted up, followed, in an open carriage by the czar and the czarina, there was an unexampled scene of enthusiasm. The people seemed delirious with joy, cheering and wildly waving their hats and handkerchiefs.

The imperial carriage stopped before the cathedral at Kazan, in order to allow the newly married pair to invoke the blessing of the Almighty. The czar and czarina were received in the porch by the metropolitan of St. Petersburg and the high clergy bearing the cross and holy water.

A Te Deum was celebrated inside the cathedral, the metropolitan official praying the Almighty to bless the czar and czarina and to guide them in their paths of duty.

When the czar reappeared on the cathedral steps after the religious ceremonies within and kissed the miraculous image of Our Lady of Kazan, the enthusiasm of the people was beyond all description. The brilliancy of the spectacle at this moment was enhanced by a sudden burst of sunshine from the clouds, which had hitherto darkened the city. The appearance of the golden rays was regarded as a good augury by the immense crowds of spectators present, who cheered themselves hoarse as the czar and czarina re-entered the carriage and returned to the Anitchkoff palace.

In honor of the czar's wedding, 40,000 poor people of this city dined to-day at the expense of the czar. All the schools have been closed for three days to give the children a holiday and enable them to celebrate the imperial marriage.

HIRSHFIELD CASE.

The Sensational Divorce Trial Drawing to a Close—The Defense Begun.

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 26.—The evidence on behalf of the plaintiff in the Hirschfeld case was concluded to-day, and the plaintiff rested. Supt. Devereaux, of the Pinkertons' detective agency, testified to hearing Anderson, the witness who testified that he was paid $400 and expenses to swear away Mrs. Hirschfeld's honor, tell his story. Hirschfeld was shown diamonds which he denied purchasing for his wife, but said that he paid the bill.

Letters in which he attempted to bully the attorneys for the defense were also introduced to prove that the witness was sane enough to attempt to intimidate them.

When the plaintiff rested a motion of the defense was made to strike out all testimony concerning Mrs. Hirschfeld's character as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial in the light of plaintiff's testimony as to auto-nuptial relationship, but this was overruled. A motion of the other side to dismiss the case was also overruled.

THE BONDS PLACED.

Secretary Carlisle Accepts the Offer of Stewart Syndicate to Take the Entire Loan.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 25.—The following official statement concerning the acceptance of the Stewart syndicate's proposal was made at the treasury to-day:

"The secretary of the treasury has accepted the proposal of Mr. John A. Stewart, president of the United States Trust Company, and his associates to purchase the entire issue of 5 per cent bonds amounting to $50,000,000 at 117.077 and accrued interest from November 1. The proceeds of the bonds under this bid will be $49,517,62 greater than they would be if the other highest bids were accepted. A very important advantage to the government in accepting this bid is the fact that all the gold will be furnished outside, and none drawn from the treasury. It is also more convenient and less expensive to the department to deal with one party rather than with many."
